

Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories: Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador

Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community development are closely intertwined in a rural part of contemporary Latin America. Using historical, documentary, and ethnographic data collected over more than a decade as an aid worker and as a researcher in central Ecuador, Jill DeTemple examines the forces that have led to this entanglement of religion and development and the ways in which rural Ecuadorians, as well as development and religious personnel, negotiate these complicated relationships. Technical innovations have been connected to religious change since the time of the Inca conquest, and Ecuadorians have created defensive strategies for managing such connections. Although most analyses of development either tend to ignore the genuinely religious roots of development or conflate development with religion itself, these strategies are part of a larger negotiation of progress and its meaning in twenty-first-century Ecuador. DeTemple focuses on three development agencies: a liberationist Catholic womens group, a municipal unit dedicated to agriculture, and evangelical Protestant missionaries engaged in education and medical work to demonstrate that in some instances Ecuadorians encourage a hybridity of religion and development, while in other cases they break up such hybridities into their component parts, often to the consternation of those with whom religious and development discourse originate. This management of hybrids reveals Ecuadorians as agents who produce and reform modernities in ways often unrecognized by development scholars, aid workers, or missionaries, and also reveals that an appreciation of religious belief is essential to a full understanding of diverse aspects of daily life. Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories: Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador examines the relationship between development and religion and the ongoing negotiation of this relationship in Ecuador. Jill DeTemple argues for an important revision to previous work that portrays contemporary religious movements as resistant to modernity, showing instead that what is happening is a reformation of what modernity and development mean. Barry Lyons, Wayne State University In this book, Jill DeTemple explores the origins of modern ideologies of progress and development and the deep, continuous interplay between religious concepts, practices, and communities and development activities in contemporary Ecuador. Only by focusing on this interplay can we understand the concrete dynamics of development. At the same time, DeTemple's innovative and nuanced work richly illuminates the broader cultural vitality and mobility of contemporary religion. Randall Styers, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Jill DeTemple examines the ways in which people negotiate religious and development discourses, using ethnography as well as historical, religious, political, and economic analyses. She explores how lived religion and local conceptions of development combine in ways that challenge both the hegemony of Western development discourses and the view that modernity is marked by increasing secularization. This book is a timely and valuable contribution to the growing field of studies in religions and development, and it will be of interest to scholars and students as well as development practitioners. Emma Tomalin, University of Leeds

Abravanel's World of Torah, upon completion, will comprise a multi-volume set of Don Yitzchak Abravanel's commentary to the Five Books of Moses. This series is not a linear translation but rather a methodical, structured interpretation of Abravanel's commentary. It is designed to be read and studied independently or can be used as an excellent guide and helpful companion to the Hebrew original.

Abravanel's World of Torah: Bereshit was originally published by Torah Renaissance Press in 2012. This was followed by a Second Printing (2nd Ed.) in 2013 and a Third Printing in 2014.

Abravanel's World of Torah: Shemot Volume I covers the first six parshiyot in Sefer Shemot. This volume features a

Factories examines the ways in which religion and community CEMENT, EARTHWORMS, AND CHEESE FACTORIES: RELIGION Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories - University of Notre Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories - University of Notre Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories - University of Notre Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories - University of Notre Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories - University of Notre Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories: Religion and Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories - University of Notre Religion and Community Development in Rural Ecuador Cement, Earthworms, and Cheese Factories examines the ways in which religion and community